

The Problem

"Don't never swap your horse
In the middle of the stream"
That surely is an old one
And for some it is their theme

To this I really do not think
David Harum would agree
For when he saw a bargain
His heart was filled with glee.

For he quickly noted all good points
And that would set him chuckling
And he would surely "swap that boss"
Even though he got a ducking

Perhaps he was not quite as slow
As some would like to make him
Their horse had failed in many ways
And his sight was growing dim.
