~~Now fine, that~~ we of to day, are one of the family, enjoying their pleasures, sympathizing in their time of trouble, having a place in our church and Sunday school, and even being able to attend a gathering such as we have here to night - I never liked the saying "Going down the journey of life," I don't like that direction. I like to think we are coming up through the years, for we are so much nearer Heaven than when we started.

It has been said of we older ones - "We are in our second childhood." Well why not, if we can see again through the clear pure eyes of childhood, catch some of their enthusiasm to enjoy the many blessings that come our way, and, as the child looks forward to the making of her earthly home, so may we, from our more mature years, anticipate entering the beautiful home "just beyond" that has been prepared for us. <sup>God's children</sup> I think we can say with Browning
I grow old along with me
The best is yet to come.
